Qimin Zhan, Ph.D

Female play a very important role in human progress and have a significant place in this society. The love for women is eternal. There are various gynecological diseases afflicting countless women, such as gynecological oncology, infertility and other common diseases. The launch of the new journal, Gynecology and Obstetrics Clinical Medicine, is a milestone for the development of gynecological oncology, oncofertility, pelvic medicine, maternal-fetal health care, reproductive medicine, public health, disease prevention etc.

There are a large number of experts, professors and scholars in Peking University. Obstetrics and Gynecology of Peking University has a profound background. Therefore, I suggest that the Journal should make full use of the expertise at Peking University, and meanwhile, invite international experts and professionals in this field to make the journal an academic platform with international influence. I believe that with diligence and dedication, Gynecology and Obstetrics Clinical Medicine will continue its mission in offering a platform for high quality research, information and communication in the field of Gynecology and Obstetrics.

Warmly congratulate GOCM on its successful publication and wish it a bright future!
